Construction of New Parkway Ramps, Wider Bridge Should Begin in 1991

by Elaine Skolnik

Bids will be advertised in early March 1991 for the construction of new on and off ramps that will connect the northbound lanes of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway to Route 193 (Greenbelt Road). Widening and modification of the Greenbelt Road bridge over the Parkway is also included in the package. The existing ramps which intersect Greenbelt Road across from the entrance of the Greenway Shopping Center will be closed after the project is completed.

Considered safer, the new T-type intersection will be located roughly half-way between the shopping center entrance and the intersection of Hanover Parkway and Greenbelt Road. The ramps are being relocated to provide improved access to and from the Parkway, particularly to provide additional "storage" space for cars exiting from the Parkway so that fewer backups on the northbound lanes will occur.

Originally given a priority status for construction, the project has been delayed because of the need (1) for the State Highway Administration (SHA) to acquire one-half acre of land for the ramps from Greenbriar homeowners and (2) for approval of design modifications to the bridge from the State Historical Preservation Office.

Although most of the land required for construction of the ramps is already owned by the county, the SHA or the Federal government, SHA still needed the half-acre of Greenbriar land. In 1988, $55,050 was placed in an account intended to cover the full valuation of land.

Dissatisfied with this figure, the Greenbriar Community Association (GCA) hired a law firm, an acoustics engineer and a master appraiser to assess the value of the property and to come up with what the association considered a more equitable compensation for the involved property.

Extensive negotiations between GCA and SHA continued throughout 1989, and in mid-1990 the matter was resolved. In a letter to Greenbriar homeowners Steve Bupp, Greenbriar managing agent and president of Condominium Venture, Inc. said "The Board is pleased to announce that a full and final settlement has been negotiated for the land taken by the State Highway Administration. The total sum the Greenbriar Community Association will receive is $220,000 . . . All money received will be spent on restoration of the recreation area."

Restoration Work

This work will include (1) construction of a fence barrier adjacent to the Parkway ramps to create at least a 60-foot-wide heavily landscaped buffer near the swimming pool and to create over several years the wooded effect that currently exists around the pool, (2) tennis court light changes for Courts 1 to 5 with Tennis Court 6 removed as part of the renovation/restoration process, and (3) landscaping on the ramp side of the fence.

Incorporated in the settlement also were provisions to protect the swimming pool operation during construction and to impose a penalty on the contractors for any failure to meet "strict construction limits."

Bupp noted that ". . . Congressional Representative Steny Hoyer and State Senator Leo Green played an active role in helping us reach this agreement."

Relocation of the ramps and modifications to the bridge are expected to take up to two years. According to the experts, it is unlikely that the improvements will bring about a "significant" improvement in the traffic congestion problems that now plague Greenbelt Road.

A recent Metropolitan Council of Government study found that the greatest decrease in average speed in Prince Georges County in the last decade was on Greenbelt Road from Lanham-Severn Road to Greenbelt from 38 miles an hour in 1980 to 28 today.

Historic Concerns Lead To Bridge Modification

by Elaine Skolnik

To meet the objections of the State's Historic Preservation Office, the original design for improving the Greenbelt Road bridge over the Baltimore-Washington Parkway has been modified. Initially, improvements to the bridge called for cantilevering (adding wings) over the stone walls to provide for widening the structure.

According to Louis DeLorme, National Park Service Chief of Roads and Trails, the Historic Preservation Office turned thumbs down on cantilevering because it essentially changed the character of the bridge. Instead of cantilevering (other than what slightly exists now), the road lanes were reduced from the proposed 12-foot width to 11-foot lanes and the median strip was narrowed from 16 feet to four feet. Extra footage was gained also by including the stone abutments in the widening process. In this way, bicycling and pedestrians will be accommodated.

Project designer Joe Makar, an associate of Hurst-Rosche Engineers, Inc. explained that "portions of the bridge were redesigned to provide the same aesthetics as there are now."

"Visually you won't be able to see the difference after the improvements are completed," said DeLorme.

Makar observed "this is a very tight, congested area and we had to find the best possible solutions within these physical constraints." He noted that bicycle lanes will be narrower than usual and that approaches to the bridge with eight-foot shoulders were not feasible.

Local pressure for a "bicycle friendly" bridge was spearheaded by Greenbelter William Clarke. Petitions were circulated and letters written requesting wide curb lanes. In response, Governor William Donald Schaefer informed the Potomac Pedalers Touring Club that "... improvements will be made with the bicyclist-pedestrian in mind. MD 193 in the westbound direction will consist of three 11-foot lanes, and a 14-foot curb lane. MD 193 in the eastbound direction will consist of two 11-foot lanes and a 13-foot curb lane. A 5-foot sidewalk will be on both the westbound and eastbound sides of the bridge. . ."

Construction of the ramps and improvements to the bridge are expected to take up to two years. The Federal Highway Department will be the project's contracting officer and will supervise the construction of the project for the National Park Service.

Design Workshop No. 1

The first of two workshops to develop the program for the Community Center planned for Greenbelt Center School will be held Saturday, January 12, 1991, in the Center School gymnasium from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop will consist of the presentation of information about the project, the building, the site and adjacent areas, and suggested uses. A number of uses have already been proposed, but new ones may still be offered. This will be followed by open discussion, focusing on how to match the building and other nearby public building space with the suggested uses.

The thoughts and comments from this workshop will assist the architects in developing alternative building programs to be considered at the second workshop to be held in late February or early March.

The public is invited to attend and participate in this process. For more information call Michael McLaughlin or Celia Wilson at the city office, 474-8000.

Letters

More on Traffic Estimates

The News Review contested a statement in my December 20 letter with a misleading editor's note based on an imprecise word choice on my part. Rather than "the city . . . retracted its original low projection," I should have said "the city dropped the Community Center use option upon which its original low traffic estimates was based." Technically, it can be said that the city never "retracted" the estimate itself, if to retract something implies an admission of error.

However, when the city dropped that use option at the April 17, 1989 City Council meeting, obviously the low traffic estimate based on it was no longer in effect. The editor's note, stating "... no retraction was made," clearly implies that the estimate did remain in effect, and is highly misleading.

As my letter tried to point out, the News Review's coverage of that meeting did not report that that option had been dropped. The News Review confirmed this in their own May 18, 1989 editor's note appended to a letter from Ruth Kastner, which included the statement, "Since that option has been dropped we saw no point in reporting on estimates relating to it." Though this statement confuses what was under dispute—the fact that the dropped option had not been reported—it does confirm that the option was dropped and apparently implies that the News Review saw no point in informing the public that the low traffic estimate was no longer in effect.

I would have been happy to provide the above documentation in support of my statement had the News Review contacted me before printing a misleading editor's note which impugned my veracity.

Semantics aside, my basic point stands: the city's withdrawal of that use option left in place a considerably higher traffic projection than what the News Review had first reported in February 1989. The News Review's December 20 editor's note obscures that fact and is continuing obfuscation of the traffic issue.

As plans for the Community Center progress, I will be carefully watching how the new traffic estimates are calculated and reported.

Charles P. Hagelgans

Complex Mind Set

In the December 27 issue of the News Review, it states that "Council has long planned to construct an athletic complex adjacent to Northway extended." Council has budgeted $15,000 to hire consultants to conduct a Northway ballfield study. Evidently, council is firmly committed to the concept, though the community may not be. It's been on the books for the past 15 years or so, but is that ample justification to go forward on a large-scale project?

In reading Park and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB) report No. 12-90 on the "Northway Fields Planning Process," it's clear that it's not a question of whether we actually need a ballfield complex, but how to implement council's long-standing plans. Maybe long ago when our woodlands were much more plentiful, a giant lit recreational complex seemed like a "grand" vision. But today in 1991, when the health of our environment is constantly being compromised and our woodlands are rapidly being decimated in the name of progress, this is exactly the kind of luxury that our environment just cannot afford (not to mention the increase in traffic, light and noise pollution).

PRAB's report notes that "the amount of field area needed is only about 10% of the acreage acquired recently by the City (Parcels 1 and 2 plus the 72 acres)." How is the destruction of 18.4 acres of precious "green belt," the last remnant of our town's namesake, "sensitive to the views of citizens who are concerned with woodland preservation," as stated in the report?

The PRAB report also states in their recommendation concerning the "Decision Process" that "public comment would be more helpful if made in response to specific proposals and alternatives." But what kind of alternatives will the public have to choose from, when all the options will involve the bulldozing of our "green belt"; it's just a question of how many acres to cut. Based on the "complex" mind set of council and PRAB's report, it's doubtful they'll even consider the possibility of determining how Greenbelt's recreational needs can be met by better utilizing and improving existing ballfields throughout the city.

Also, shouldn't we wait until the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (under the Aid to Municipalities program) concludes its recreational needs assessment study, initiated upon city council's request, before developing plans for a massive lighted Northway ballfield complex?

Shield of Dreams

While we have been involved in holiday preparations and celebrations these past six or seven weeks, a great exodus has been under way. The spouses, children and grandchildren of Greenbelt families are leaving regularly for foreign ports as military focus shifts to Operation Desert Shield. As we begin this new decade, we look around and learn, perhaps for the first time, that the faces we missed around town were not just away for the holidays.

Our youngest son is aboard a fast frigate dry-docked at Norfolk. For several weeks he has watched the great grey hulks slide out of the harbor bearing hundreds of young, anxious faces. The word 'shield', he says, tightens shoulders and reduces a pleasant grin to a somber glare. This same son counsels that one of the great difficulties, particularly for young, unattached military people, is the absence of mail—of places and names and things familiar.

Here in Greenbelt, the word 'shield' is taking on a new meaning. Ours is a shield that protects all of those familiar sights and activities, keeping them alive while they are "on hold." It is News Review, Post and Journal sports clippings, movie reviews, birthday greetings, and light newsy letters from neighbors.

If you have a family member on active duty in the armed forces, please send the mailing address, birthday, Greenbelt neighborhood, and, if you like, a brief biographical sketch, to Shield of Dreams, P.O. Box 721, Greenbelt, Md. 20768. Shield of Dreams will give the information to a Greenbelt neighbor who promises to write at least once each week.
